Chapter 1 by Thy

"You are the fairest in all the land, of that, there is no doubt." Lin grinned before placing a soft kiss just above her eyebrow. She was splayed out beneath Lin, hands resting on her stomach, a small smile on her face and a coy look in her eyes.

Elise rolled her eyes. "You," she started, before moving to sit up, "need to stop teasing."

Lin's grin widened. "I'll stop teasing when you stop being so lovely to look at." With a groan, Elise slipped out of the bed, picking up her tunic from the floor. "I am serious," she murmured, but the tilt of her lips and the light blush that graced her cheeks said otherwise.

A sudden sharp knock made the two of them jump. "My Lady! Urgent news from the Queensguard!"

"Just one moment!" Elise called out in a sing-song voice. Lin shot her a faux dirty look. "Titles are not a joking matter, Lise."

Elise replied with a hand gesture that would make anyone's mother give them a stern talking to. With a shake of the head, Lin crossed to the threshold of their room and opened the door to a young squire, who bowed immediately. "What is your urgent news, squire?"

The squire was red-faced, panting slightly from having rushed to find Lin. "My Lady," he started, before wiping a bead of sweat from his temple, "the Queensguard would have me inform you that a dragon has been sighted down by Killam's Square."
